Google for Startups Accelerator: Climate Change is a 10-week hybrid program of intensive workshops and expert mentorship for growth-stage startups based in Europe and Israel. The accelerator aims to connect the best of Google's products and people to climate change and clean technology innovators across the region building with Cloud.

Selected startups from across the region will receive mentoring and technical support from Google engineers and external experts tailored to their business through a mix of in-person and virtual experiences, one-to-one and one-to-many learning sessions.

What to expect

10-week hybrid (online and in-person) program with workshops and mentoring sessions followed by an in-person demo day showcase:

- Exclusive access to mentoring from Google leaders, engineers and external experts
- Scaling Sustainable impact companies to solve the specific challenges around energy and climate
- Workshops covering Cloud and ML, product, design, growth and people
- Equity-free support & Cloud Credits
- Access to global Accelerator Alumni community

Who should apply?

Google is looking for growth-stage startups meeting the following criteria:

- Seed & Series A high potential tech startups working on Climate Change solutions with growing teams (5+ people) headquartered in Europe or Israel
- Deeply technical startups leveraging Cloud or AI/ML in their product, service, or operations and have sustainability expertise.
- Funded and revenue-generating startups
- Keen to participate and learn from experts, both via 1:1 sessions and group workshops, including attendance by min. 3 C-level executives at all physical events and online bootcamps.
