

Workshop: Seeking Investors

Over two half days, delegates will gain an insight into the requirements of investors, ranging from angel groups through to venture capital funds. Many sources of finance will be discussed and assessed, both equity and debt.

Each step in the process of raising finance will be discussed and detailed, including how to make successful approaches to potential funders. Documentation and data requirements are explained and specified, with specific case studies, and an introduction to valuation methodologies. A short presentation on alternative financing, including crowdfunding, is also included.

This module will also complement the “Working with Corporates” module, which is delivered on the day after, and includes guidance and practical knowledge on corporate investment.

The EIC Academy offers multiple workshops for small companies funded by the EIC pilot - see the calendar.

What will you learn?

Delegates will be introduced to the full process of fundraising, with a focus on the best ways of finding potential investors, communicating and pitching, and understanding negotiation tactics and terms and conditions. All potential sources of finance – from local banks through to private equity – will be covered and assessed relevant to the specific needs of the delegates. The particular needs of venture capital, and the advantages and disadvantages of this type of funding, will be covered as well as a “deep dive” into a typical method of early stage company valuation. Additionally, the specific requirements for finding, approaching and informing funders will be covered, including the needs of banks for debt finance.

Topics specifically covered include:

- sources of finance and their suitability for companies at different stages
- bank funding advantages and disadvantages
- venture capital advantages and disadvantages
- overview of alternative financing including equity crowdfunding
- what needs to be in place before raising finance
- preparing and planning your fundraising
- finding and approaching funders
- what investors are looking for – past, present and future financials and market data
- dealing with investors – the offer, due diligence, and closing the deal
- key factor: is your price cheap or expensive? Basic concepts on Enterprise Value calculation
- beyond the price: deal terms

The workshop combines specifics of the fundraising process, and the suitability of different types of funding to companies in different sectors, stages of growth and market readiness.

Agenda

Day one 13:00 to 17:30

Delegates are invited to share briefly their own business funding situation, and their general and specific challenges for accessing future finance, as well as an indicator of the amount of funds they are seeking, and their initial company valuations. Based on this input, the workshop will explain the likely sources of finance, including banks, and venture capital, from small funders to large international groups. A comprehensive exploration of all the requirements, from preparation to pitching, will be provided, as well as in-depth descriptions of all the documentation and typical terms and conditions provided and required by traditional investors. Hints and tips on negotiating, achieving a mutually beneficial deal, and what to avoid will be discussed in an informal session.

Day one 19:30 to 22:00

Informal networking dinner for all delegates, the workshop presenters, coaches and local EIC pilot supporters

Day two 08:30– 12:30

An initial discussion will expand the points made the previous day, and their relevance to the delegates’ own situations, now and in future. To help delegates understand the financial rationale behind valuations, a typical valuation formula will be explained. Working in teams, delegates will work on their own valuations using this model, and then discuss the results and implications. A final “Dragon’s Den” where delegates will make a brief pitch to an “investor” and a “banker” provides a lively completion to the workshop.
